The Road to Enlightenment

Littering a dark and dreary road lay the past relics of browser-specific incompatible DOMs, and broken CSS support.

Today, we must clear the mind of past practices. Web enlightenment achieved thanks to the tireless efforts of folk like the W3C, WaSP and browser creators.

The css Zen Garden invites you to relax and meditate on the importance of the masters. Begin to see with clarity. Learn to use the (yet to be) techniques in new and invigorating fashion. Become one with the web.

So What is This About?

There is clearly a need for CSS to be taken seriously by graphic designers. Zen Garden aims to excite, inspire, and encourage participation. You can view some of the existing designs in the list. Clicking on any one of the style sheet into this very page. The code remains the same. The only thing that has changed is the external .css file. Yes, really.

the Cooperative Bug Isolation Project

Software is Buggy

- » Computers aren't supposed to crash, but they do.
- » But why does the software work just fine for your office mate?
- » What's going wrong when the software crashes?

You Can Make a Difference

The Bug Isolation Project is a research effort designed to answer these questions. We distribute special versions of popular open source software packages. These special versions monitor their own behavior, log errors, and report back how they work (or how they fail to work) in the hands of real users like you.

Each crash tells us a little bit more about how things can go wrong. When the software works, it tells us how things are supposed to work. Thus, every time you use the software, you are helping us learn. If you've never written a line of code in your life, you can help make things better for everyone by testing and reporting bugs in special bug-hunting packages.

The monitoring is transparent and low overhead; you should not notice any difference at all in the software's behavior or performance. Furthermore, the entire system is engineered to protect your privacy and the data we collect from start to finish.

Ready to Hunt Some Bugs?

All you need to do is install our software and you're ready to go. You don't need to be a programmer to participate. Just use your computer as you would normally. Our system will learn and find bugs for you, and provide automatic feedback from you and a few thousand of your closest friends.

Not quite convinced? You may wish to learn more about the project or contact the project.

Like most people who love mythical creatures (cryptozoology), I also collect stamps (philately). At last, someone has combined these twin fetishes in one easily displayed fashion. My favorites include the Loch Ness Monster and his ancient cousin the Kraken, especially these two which feature a guest appearance by Mickey Mouse.

Roland Piquepaille, author of the excellent Technology Trends blog and frequent contributor to Slashdot, is accused of using plagiarism, Slashdot and his own blog to pump up his Blogads revenue. Long quotes and summarization of sources are staples of the blogging culture. When revenue is involved, some infer that the blogger owes more than just credit to their sources.
